

Assoc. Prof. Andreana Pexara

Position: Associate Professor

Department: Laboratory of Hygiene of Foods of Animal Origin, Faculty of Veterinary Science, School of Health Sciences

University: University of Thessaly

Short Bio:

Andreana Pexara is an Associate Professor of Hygiene of Foods of Animal Origin and Head of the Division of Food Safety and Technology and Epidemiology in the Faculty of Veterinary Science, School of Health Sciences, University of Thessaly, Greece. She was supervisor of a PhD thesis, supervisor in more than 20 postgraduate theses (MSc), member in the three-member advisory thesis committees of 5 PhD theses and more than 40 MSc theses. Since 2008, along with her undergraduate teaching at the Faculty of Veterinary Science, she has taught more than 12 different courses and 300 hours in 4 different postgraduate study programmes in the University of Thessaly. She has published more than 100 papers and abstracts in peer-reviewed international journals and conferences. She is also the author of 2 chapters in books. She has served as a member of the Editorial board of international journals and reviewer for 13 scientific international journals.